The color purple is associated with a variety of meanings, including wisdom, creativity, royalty, power, ambition, and luxury. It can also represent magic, extravagance, peace, pride, independence, and wealth. As with other colors, purple is the subject of color psychology, which suggests that colors can have a powerful impact on moods and even behaviors. Each color is thought to have its own effect, but the feeling that each color produces can vary based on experience and culture. Like other colors, purple can lead to differing feelings, emotions, and associations. What does the color purple mean? How does the color purple make you feel? People often describe this color as mysterious, spiritual, and imaginative. Purple tends to occur rarely in nature, so it is viewed as rare and intriguing. If you're wondering what colors make purple, purple is a combination of the primary colors blue and red. So what are some of the most common associations people have with the color purple? The feelings that the color purple evokes are often due to cultural associations. Because purple is so strongly associated with royalty, people often perceive it as being a very regal color. These associations with royalty, as well as wealth, stem from the fact that the purple dye used in ancient times was very rare and extremely expensive. The resources needed to create a dye in this color were much harder to come by (since purple is uncommon in nature) and much more costly. So only the elite could use purple dye. These associations with extravagance and aristocracy persist to this day. The color purple became associated with wealth and royalty because, oftentimes, the rich were the only individuals who could afford clothing and other household items that were dyed purple. Around 1200 B.C.E., the city of Tyre (along the coast of ancient Phoenicia) began producing purple dye by crushing the shells of a small sea snail. The resulting color became known as Tyrian purple and was so well known it was mentioned in Homer's "Iliad" and Virgil's "Aeneid." Alexander the Great and the kings of Egypt also wore clothing colored with the famous Tyrian purple. This connection with royalty was not just restricted to ancient times. Purple was the color of choice for the Purple Robe of Estate worn by Queen Elizabeth II on her way back to Buckingham Palace following her coronation in 1953. Within the LGBTQ+ community, the purple of the pride flag represents non-binary gender identities. In the bisexual flag, the red and blue overlap to form purple representing bisexuality. Some of the symbolic meanings and associations with the color purple include: CreativityEmotionalityEnlightenmentFemininityImaginationInspirationMysteryRarityRoyaltySpirituality Purple also represents wisdom and spirituality. Its rare and mysterious nature perhaps causes it to seem connected to the unknown, supernatural, and divine. Different shades of purple have different spiritual meanings. For instance, light purples are associated with light-hearted, romantic energies, while darker shades can represent sadness and frustration. In some parts of Europe, purple is associated with death and mourning. In the U.S., the Purple Heart is among the highest honors for bravery in military service. The award, originally called the Badge of Military Merit, was created in 1782 by George Washington to give to soldiers for commendable action. The color represents courage and bravery. While by no means scientific, liking purple might mean that you have positive feelings about some of the main associations of the color. So if purple is your favorite color, it might signify that you have an artistic, thoughtful, and intuitive side. You might also enjoy thinking about spiritual issues and the meaning of life. Of course, it might just mean that it is your favorite color due to your unique, individual associations and experiences. AmethystLavenderLilacMulberryOrchidPlumPucePomegranateRoyal purpleVioletWine Since purple does not often occur in nature, it can sometimes appear exotic or artificial. For this reason, it tends to be quite a polarizing color. People tend to either really love purple or really hate it. Visually, purple is one of the most difficult colors to discriminate. It also has the strongest electromagnetic wavelength, being just a few wavelengths up from x-rays and gamma rays. For this reason, it is often used in visual illusions such as the lilac chaser illusion. In writing, the phrase "purple prose" is sometimes used to describe writing that is extremely imaginative or even prone to exaggeration, hyperbole, or outright lies. When discussing color meaning, it's also important to recognize the role that various biological factors play in perceiving it. Several factors affect how the brain perceives the color purple, such as vision, light, and a person's interpretation of what the color represents. Additional factors that can contribute to how a person perceives a color is its hue, its level of saturation or purity, and how bright or dull it is. All these play into the frequency, wavelength, and energy associated with the color, which also changes how the eye and, subsequently, the brain perceive it. That means that everyone's perception and interpretation of the color purple can be different. Responses to the color purple can vary considerably from one person to the next, but many feel that the color seems royal yet mysterious. Notice how purple is used in the image that accompanies this article. Consider how the color purple makes you feel. Do you associate purple with certain qualities or situations? Frequently Asked Questions What does the color purple mean spiritually? The answer appears to differ based on sex. Women who prefer the color purple are thought to constantly develop themselves spiritually. They seek peace, harmony, protection, and support. Men who prefer purple tend to be more spiritually expressive. They live life on their own terms, sometimes to the point of appearing vain or arrogant. What are some famous examples of the color purple in history? Roman emperors including Julius Caesar and Augustus wore purple as a sign of power and wealth. Purple was also the chosen color for the women's suffrage movement in the early 1900s, representing freedom and dignity.The award-winning novel The Color Purple, written by Alice Walker in 1982, was later turned into a movie and a musical. The music icon Prince was also associated with this color, celebrating it in his song Purple Rain. Where does the color purple appear in nature? Some fruits are purple, such as grapes and eggplant. (Yes, eggplant is technically a fruit.) Several plants also flower purple blooms. Lavender, lilac, morning glory, wisteria, and clematis can all be found in purple shades ranging from light to dark. Alice Walker's Pulitzer Prize-winning 1982 novel about Celie, a young black girl living in 1930s Georgia, isn't the most obvious story to make into a musical. It's a searing portrait of oppression, told from the point of view of a girl who is raped, abused, lied to, beaten and manipulated from a young age by the men around her. But this Tony-nominated musical, which is performed for the first time in Europe at the Memier Chocolate Factory, taps into the qualities that made both the novel and Steven Spielberg's film so popular, and it emerges as the tale of an everywoman triumphing over adversity, and a testament to the power of hope. John Doyle's canny direction has the wooden whitewashed stage bare except for some chairs at the back, which are used as seats and workmen's tools. It leaves room for the story to unfold simply through a formidable 17-strong ensemble, who perform Brenda Russell, Stephen Bray and Allee Willis's wonderful and satisfyingly varied score of roof-lifting gospel, rhythmical jazz and throaty blues with remarkable clout. Although there's certainly the opportunity here, Marsha Norman's script isn't sentimental. There's a lot packed in, and not much space left for detailed character development, which means it occasionally feels a smidgen lightweight. But the character that matters, Celie, is sharply written and her transformation from underdog to stable, strong-willed woman is subtle and convincing. The petite Cynthia Erivo gives a deliberately slow-build performance as Celie. It's a superb turn with a spine-tinglingly great climax that betrays her beguiling and impressive talent. Nicola Hughes as Shug Avery and Sophia Nomvete as Sofia provide strong support, and both play up the piece's humour well. Hughes in particular is excellent and brings out the allure of bisexual nightclub singer Shug, while also baring her fractured, wayward soul. Together, the three of them drive an ultimately uplifting and heart-capturing evening. By Daisy Bowie-Sell Apple The blue iPhone 12 may have made headlines when the iPhone 12 series first launched, but now there's a fancy new color on offer — purple. The new color was unveiled at Apple's spring hardware event. The new color is now available as an option on the iPhone 12 and iPhone 12 Mini — though not on the iPhone 12 Pro. It offers a glossy look similar to other iPhone 12 color options, and frankly, it looks great alongside the other bright and fun colors that the iPhone 12 comes in. Apple in general, the iPhone 12 represented a big shift for the iPhone series in both design and features. The series offers a flat-edged look similar to that of the iPhone 4 and iPhone 5 series, but with a more modern edge-to-edge display and larger camera module. Under the hood, the iPhone 12 offers the Apple A14 processor, which is the most powerful chip to ship in an iPhone to date. The iPhone 12 broke new ground for the iPhone in other ways too. Notably, the series is the first iPhone series to offer 5G connectivity, and while that probably won't make for a radically different experience yet, it will when 5G is more widespread. The iPhone 12 also finally gets a stunning new OLED display. Apple is no stranger to OLED technology — but previously, the tech was limited to "Pro" iPhones like the iPhone 11 Pro. OLED displays make for deeper black levels and can help improve battery life. Apple The iPhone 12 series also comes at a decent price, at least compared to other flagship phones of the time. The device costs $829 for the standard iPhone 12 or $729 for the smaller-sized iPhone 12 Mini. Those devices are joined by the $999 iPhone 12 Pro and the $1,099 iPhone 12 Pro Max — though as mentioned, those Pro devices don't come in the new purple color. Of course, the iPhone 12 won't be the flagship iPhone for long — we've been hearing rumors about the upcoming iPhone 13 for months now, and it's expected to be released in September this year. The new purple iPhone 12 color option will be available for pre-order starting Friday, April 13, with full retail availability set to start on April 30. Thankfully, it won't cost more than the iPhone 12 usually does. You'll be able to get it for yourself straight from the Apple website and from other major electronics retailers.
